DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-6 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 U.S.C. § 103

2. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

3. Claims 1, 4-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over H. G.

Gibble. (U.S.2,855,679) in view of C. I. Durst at el. (U.S.2,822,615).

Gibble ('679) discloses a gage attachment for drills having:

Regarding claim 1, a hand-held tool (see fig. 1), a casing or housing (17), a bulb (18) located within the casing (17), mounting means (14, 15) for attaching the casing within the hand-held tool, power means (19) for providing to the light source (18/or 26), wherein the light source (18/or 26) would be positioned to project a beam of light (18/or 26) in a forward direction relevant to the hand-held tool when the tool would be in operation.

Art Unit: 2875

Regarding claim 4, the power means (19) would be standard household current.

Regarding claim 5, the hand-held tool would be a power drill (see figs. 1 and 3).

Gibble ('679) does not disclose mounting means for attaching the casing to the hand-held tool.

Durst ('615) discloses a drill attachment precision verifier having:

Regarding claim 1, mounting means or body member (21) for attaching the casing or housing (25) to the hand-held tool (see figs. 1-2).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize the gage attachment for drills of Gibble ('679) with the mounting means for attaching the casing to the hand-held tool disclosed by Durst ('615) for the benefit and advantage to provide an attachment for use with an electric drill, the attachment including a light bulb or light source which is adapted to pass through a housing that is detachably connected to the drill so that the job of properly lining up the drill is facilitated.

Art Unit: 2875

4. Claims 2-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gible ('679) in view of Durst at el. ('615) as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Smoke et al. (U.S.5,797,670) .

Moke ('670) discloses a portable power tool light, accessory mounting belt, and method of using same having:

Regarding claim 2, the power means (40) would further include at least one battery, the battery located within the hand-held tool.

Regarding claim 3, the power means (40) would further include at least one battery, the battery located within the hand-held tool (col. 5, lines 43-50).

Regarding claim 6, the hand-held tool would be a chain saw (see fig. 1).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize the gage attachment for drills of Gible ('679) in view of Durst ('615) with the battery disclosed by Snoke ('670) for benefit and advantage to provide a hand-held tool having a battery very useful when the working area power station is down, further it is convenient for place where the electric cord is not accessible.

Art Unit: 2875

5. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Gibble ('679) in view of Durst ('615) as applied to claim 1 above, and further in view of Gassen et al. (U.S.5,016,355).

Gibble ('679) in view of Durst ('615) disclose the claimed invention except the chain saw.

Regarding claim 6, the hand-held would be a chain saw (see fig. 1).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to utilize the gage attachment for drills of Gibble ('679) with the chain saw disclosed by Gassen ('355) for the benefit and advantage to provide a hand-held having a chain saw including a motor, a guide and a housing forming a rear handle. Suitable screws are provided to fixedly mount the top piece to the bottom. However, the bottom piece of the top portion may be separately manufactured and fixedly connected to the housing, because the top and bottom pieces can be provided as a single unitary integrally formed member if so desired.

Conclusion

6. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

L. F. Cameron et al. (U.S.3,525,588) discloses an illuminated electric drill and the like.

Art Unit: 2875

C. I. Durst et al. (U.S.2,822,615) discloses a drill attachment precision verifier.
